Brady Quinn and Chinedum Ndukwe to Visit Memorial Children's Hospital

Monday, June 21
1:30 p.m.

Former Notre Dame football standouts Brady Quinn and Chinedum Ndukwe will visit Memorial Children's Hospital on Monday, June 21 at 1:30 p.m. Their visit will include a trip to Memorial's pediatric and pediatric intensive care units, as well as patients in the Pediatric Hematology/Oncology program. This visit coincides with their speaking engagement at the 2010 KeyBank Gridiron Legends Luncheon Series presented by the College Football Hall of Fame

The two players have a longstanding history and friendship that dates back to the seventh grade when they began playing football together for the first time. The pair went on to play together each year until 2007 when they each were selected by different teams in the NFL draft. Currently, Quinn is a quarterback for the Denver Broncos, and Ndukwe is a safety for the Cincinnati Bengals.

"The Hall of Fame is honored to be able to partner with KeyBank to bring some of the most inspiring names in football to the community," said Hall of Fame Executive Director Lisa Klunder. "The Hall of Fame values our strong relationship with Memorial Hospital and are fortunate that we are able to team up to make this visit possible."
